Exposure to CO2 at high concentrations is considered a serious welfare concern because it is highly aversive and causes pain, fear, and respiratory distress.“

- June 17, 2020 - EU Food Safety Authority

“Those animals suffered terribly. They suffered horribly...“It was absolutely a violation of federal law. They were not stunned. It was inhumane.”

- Jim Reynolds DVM, MPVM, DACAW Professor of Large Animal Medicine and Welfare, Western University
